

TO TEST AERIAL BATTLESHIP

CARRIES GUN THAT SHOTS DOWN FROM ANY HEIGHT.

Hopes of Military Men for Accurate Means of Throwing Bombs From Air May be Realized.

New York, N. Y.—Military and naval authorities the world over will be interested in the tests that are now to be made at Mineola with the first bomb dropping apparatus for aeroplanes. Lieut. Riley E. Scott, a graduate of West Point, has invented a gun that can be aimed from any height while an aeroplane is in motion and discharge a bomb that is expected to hit the mark.

Guns have been invented that will shoot at aeroplanes from the ground, but heretofore no gun has been built to be used from a flying machine.

With Lieut. Scott's device the exact speed at which an aeroplane is traveling and its height from the earth can be determined, something that has been heretofore practically impossible. Knowing these two elements the operator is able to release the bomb with more certainty than ever before that it will find its mark.

CLEARING HOUSE FOR FARMERS

Kansas State Agricultural College Will Help Producers Dispose of Their Crops.

Manhattan, Kansas.—Farmers who have been having trouble finding markets for their products should write to the Kansas State Agricultural college for help. That institution has a sort of clearing house for buyers and sellers of farm produce. The "clearing house" at the agricultural college was planned and put into operation last year by C. V. Holinger, horticulturist with the extension department, and it is a success.

This department will be glad to tell the farmer where he can market his goods at the least expense to him. It makes no difference where he lives, whether it is on the Rock Island, the Union Pacific, the Central Branch or wherever it is a list of the most reputable buyers along all railroads in Kansas has been compiled for his benefit, and it is free for the asking. This "clearing house" will tell which markets are the most convenient and which can be reached the quickest. It will also answer questions about picking, packing and shipping.

DANIEL AND HIS COMPANIONS

Sunday School Lesson for Sept. 10, 1911
Specially Arranged for This Paper

LESSON TEXT.—Daniel 1:3-20.

MEMORY VERSES, 3, 9.

GOLDEN TEXT.—"It is good neither to eat flesh, nor drink wine, nor anything whereby thy brother stumbleth."—Rom. 14:21.

TIME.—B. C. 605-4. The third year of King Jehoiakim (Lesson VII). The accession year of Nebuchadnezzar, when Daniel was carried captive to Babylon. The next year is called his first year.

PERIOD.—Three years, B. C. 605-4-603-3, on Nebuchadnezzar's return to Babylon after defeating the armies of Egypt.

PLACE.—Babylon on the Euphrates. Before his captivity Daniel lived in Jerusalem.

PLACE IN THE HISTORY.—2 Kings 24:1-6; 2 Chron. 36:5-8.

PROPHETS.—Jeremiah and Habakkuk were prophesying at Jerusalem when Daniel was carried away, and Ezekiel was his contemporary in Babylon, but not in the city of Babylon. He was on the river Chebar, southeast of the city.

At the time of this lesson the two great world powers were in deadly conflict. The Egyptian army under Necho had marched toward Babylon as far as Carchemish on the Euphrates.

On the other hand Nabopolassar with the assistance of the Scythians had conquered the Assyrians, and destroyed Nineveh, the capital, B. C. 606. The Babylonians marched up the Euphrates and met the Egyptian army at Carchemish, and defeated them. Nabopolassar, king of Babylon, sent his son Nebuchadnezzar on to Jerusalem, who besieged that city. Jeremiah speaks of the siege as in 604, Jehoiakim's fourth year, probably in the early part, so that a difference in the period covered by the Babylonian and the Jewish years would account for the variation. The last part of 605 is treated as Nebuchadnezzar's accession year, and 604 his first year as king.

At this time Nabopolassar died and Nebuchadnezzar hastened back to Babylon, taking with him a number of captives including Daniel and his three companions, from royal or princely families, either as hostages or persons whom he could train for his official service.

The names of the four young princes were all compounded with the name of God. Daniel—God is my judge; Hananiah—Jehovah is gracious; Mishael—This is as God; Azariah—Jehovah is a helper. Their new names were compounded with those of royalty or of idols. Daniel was named Belteshazzar, favored of Bel or Belits, the great Babylonian god and goddess. The custom of changing names continues up to this day; any change from Mohammedan to Christian, or the reverse, being accompanied by a change of name. These four were selected from among the captives on account of their noble descent, talent and promise of ability, to be trained in the language and literature of the Chaldeans, to be trusted officers.

When these young men were selected for their future career, several things were appointed for their training. Like the training of young men now in professional schools, after college graduation. Their names were changed, as noted above, so that, at least officially, they would be in harmony with the administration, and not known distinctively as Jews. They were to be trained in court customs and ways, doubtless with other young men of heathen morals and religion. They were given luxurious foods such as the king ate, and costly wines such as the king drank.

Now here was a strenuous test of the faith, the courage and the self-control of the young men. The eating of the king's food would be a breaking of the Jewish law as to food, and thus be a repudiating of the religion of the true God. The dietary would almost certainly comprise articles of food, such as the flesh of swine, hares, etc., which the law interdicted to the Israelites.

The young men were greatly favored by having a friend at court. God had brought Daniel into favor and tender love; had made him to find kindness and compassion. God had made Daniel lovable, giving him attractiveness of person and wisdom of mind; moreover, the Holy Spirit had doubtless moved directly upon the heart of Ashpenaz, turning him toward Daniel. All true love and friendship are inspired by God.

Said Daniel to Melzar: "Give us pulse to eat." Rather, vegetable food in general; there is no reason for restricting the Hebrew word used to leguminous fruits, such as beans and peas, which is what the term "pulse" properly denotes. "And date to drink instead of the wine." They began the simple life.

The result of the test was better physical condition, countenances fairer, fatter in flesh. The simple life brought better bodily health, more beauty, greater strength and activity, all that was needed for the best work and the highest joy, of which the body is capable.
